

PROCLAMATION

Hear ye, hear ye, all lads (and lassies) of nautical persuasion.

It is our great privilege to bestow this honor upon one of our own by virtue of his extensive knowledge, incorrigible wit, enduring charm, and leprechaunish humor (although limited to Irish jokes); as well as his long association with the Society as a loyal member, unwavering supporter of the mission, friend of the masses, gentlemanly-like behavior (at times), and dedicated servant to the art and skill of editorial comment for such scholarly maritime ship Journals as those of Marine Technology, Research and Production to which we all subscribe.

Therefore, and without further ado, by the powers entrusted in us by the Council of the Great Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, we proclaim this day, and all December tenth's henceforth, to be

"Terry Flanagan Day"
